Recent college grad- saved me time and was a confidence boosterBy ChrisSo,I just graduated USD School of business and was so worried when I graduated because I just didn't know where to start with the job application process. I had gone through the entire job listings posted by the university but spent too much time I didn't have looking at each job trying to decide if it was right for me and then panicking and applying needlessly to tons of jobs that didn't suit me. It was an incredibly time-consuming process because I didn't know what I wanted. Reading Ramen to Riches and putting the effort into their self-discovery activities allowed me to find out what I wanted and to use my network rather than a google search. In a short period of time working productively and making daily progress I was able to find my current job as a project manager for a contracting firm, gaining the experience leading projects from start to finish that I know I will need for my future as a social entrepreneur. If you don't know what you want, I recommend giving Ramen to Riches a quick look, it's a quick easy read and just puts into words in a fluent and orderly manner all those things you kinda think but need to hear to know. The confidence boost I got is worth the money.In the words of the author, ""when you are more specific about what you want, people are better able to help you find it."Good luck in your job search!4 of 5 people found the following review helpful. No fluff here..By P. OSullivanI read the previous Ramen to Riches book and shared it with several younger members of my family. Then read this one to see if it matched up. This book is even better than the first. It is well organized, to the point and very insightful. I ended up getting 5 copies sent to each of my nieces and nephews with the note "I wish I had this book when I was in my 20's". Both books provide a lifetime of valuable information.0 of 1 people found the following review helpful.
