Eleanor Reardon Tolson, William J. Reid, Charles D. Garvin : Generalist Practice before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Generalist Practice:

This essential text presents a "task-centered" methodology a structured, short-term problem-solving approach applicable across systems at five levels of practice: the individual, the family, the group, organizations, and communities. The second edition offers more information on systems theories and includes case studies and practice questions with each chapter, as well as checklists for each level of practice and exercises to help students monitor their understanding and skill development.

The leading text on the task centered approach in social work practice. I would recommend this text to any social work educator and student who is seeking a comprehensive practice effective approach of working with client groups across the helping spectrum. About the Author Eleanor Reardon Tolson is retired from the Jane Addams College of Social Work in the University of Illinois at Chicago. William J. Reid is chair of the doctorate in social work program at the State University of New York at Albany. Charles D. Garvin is professor emeritus at the School of Social Work in the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor.
