Results completely unmeasurableBy Bonnie LassI love the whole "create or save 3 to 4 million jobs." That statement makes measuring results completely impossible. Not at all impressed with this book.

Save your money; the way things are going economically, you will need it.

President Obama's huge economic stimulus plan aims to create or save 3 to 4 million jobs for recession-weary Americans and for a nation in need of rebuilding, modernization, and recovery. But which jobs, exactly, offer the most opportunity for workers? This new book covers the best occupations that are in demand from this bold initiative, including jobs in infrastructure, energy, green technology, health care, education, and manufacturing. Occupational expert Laurence Shatkin, Ph.D., explains where the great jobs are in President Obama's American Recovery and Reinvestment Plan so readers can be first in line for careers with high pay, strong growth, and good security as the country rebounds from recession.
