If you've ever felt anxious about the process of getting or writing a letter of recommendation, this book is for you! Packed with sample letters, templates, and advice, this guide is designed to help you distinguish between the run-of-the-mill 'good' letter and the 'great' letters that make admissions committees and employers sit up and take notice. If you're a LOR seeker, we'll teach you how to approach potential recommenders, how to prepare them to write the best possible letter for you, and even how to avoid the most common pitfalls when you're asked to ghostwrite your own recommendation. Are you a LOR writer? This book is a valuable resource for you as well. Whether you're writing a recommendation for the first time or just need a refresher, you'll find discussion of relevant legal issues and tricky LOR situations, as well as a rundown of the traits that college, graduate, and professional programs are most interested in hearing about. Great Letters of Recommendation features 50 sample letters that run the gamut from high school to post-graduate, and from scholarship applications to work references and testimonials.

About the Author Don Osborne founded INQUARTA in 1994 and for the past 18 years he has helped more than 10,000 students apply to medical school, dental school, MBA school, law school, and other graduate programs. He is a professional admissions coach, a former MCAT instructor, a speaker, and author, a tennis lover, and a tech geek. Don travels to colleges around the United States to speak to Premeds and other graduate school hopefuls about the steps they need to take to accomplish their educational goals. His passion, his drive, and his purpose is to discover the smartest admissions strategies out there and share them with students, so all students can get accepted to the program that will take them to the places they have always wanted to go.
