Old Griswold cast iron, aluminum and porcelain cookware is highly collected today because it still does its primary job well and is prolific at antiques markets. This guide presents the forms in many of their variations with approximate values to reflect today's markets. Lists of the pattern numbers and the duplicate numbers help to identify items you may find.

Hundreds of items cast from the Griswold Manufacturing Company provide another good look into the cast metal cookware produced in Erie, Pennsylvania. None of the items in the first volume have been included in this volume, offering a completely different glimpse at Griswold collectibles. All items have listed pattern numbers and up-to-date values. -- Book Description
