By Karl Holloway He grew as many, many Black Intellectuals/radicals during the 60's, 70's and 80's grew. We flirted with an imagined intellectual coalition with White radicals, themselves grew. We Blacks split from White radicals when their radicalism centered on Vietnam. Baraka's writings record this split and our new focus. When he moves from The Village to Harlem and when he divorces his white wife, we see his narrowing focus. This is why reading HOME is essential reading Black (not Negro)0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Sliding HomeBy wayne moreland"Home" is an exceptional look at Mr Baraka's changing modes ideas. One of the essays, "Hunting Is Not Those Heads on the Wall" is breathtaking in its originality0 of 9 people found the following review helpful. Social EssaysBy ClydeI have not read yet.
