From Brand: Routledge : Housing for the Elderly: Policy and Practice Issues before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Housing for the Elderly: Policy and Practice Issues:

Find out how housing options for the elderly are changingand not always for the betterTo maintain or improve their quality of life, many seniors in the United States will move to new locations and into new types of housing. Housing for the Elderly addresses the key aspects of the transitions theyll face, examines how housing programs can help, and looks at the role social workers can play to ensure they remain healthy, happy, and productive as they age. Housing for the Elderly provides the tools to build a comprehensive understanding of how housing is changing to support the growing number of elderly persons in the United States. This unique resource examines a full range of housing options, including assisted-living communities, elder friendly communities, and homelessness; looks at the effects of the Olmstead Decision of 1999, which requires states to place persons with disabilities in community settings rather than in institutions; and summarizes current research on Naturally Occurring Retirement Communities (NORCs). The book also presents a historical perspective of housing issues for the elderly, with a special focus on the discrimination of African-Americans. Topics in Housing for the Elderly include: creating elder friendly communities homelessness among the elderly in Toronto housing disparities for older Puerto Ricans in the United States grandparent caregiver housing programs how the Olmstead Decision affects the elderly, social workers, and health care providers New York States experience with NORCs relocation concerns of people living in NORCs the integration of services for the elderly into housing settings-particularly low-income housing moving from a nursing home to an assisted-living facility assisted-living and Medicaid and much more!Housing for the Elderly is an essential resource for social work practitioners, administrators, researchers, and academics who deal with the elderly.

MAKES AN IMPORTANT CONTRIBUTION to ongoing federal and state discussions, offering unique perspectives on how the Olmstead ruling's potential for fairness and integration can be applied to older Americans. The empirically-based discussions of NORCs and assisted living programs add new levels of data and texture to ongoing program design issues and related policy debates, as well. -- James F. O'Sullivan, Sr. Program Officer, John A. Hartford Foundation, New York Very important . . . carries the message that getting it right has very serious implications for public policy and for the individual. . . . They also provide us with important ways to think about this individual and ethereal notion of quality of life -- Neal E. Lane, Former Director of the New York State Office for the Aging and a partner with Optimum Partners Consulting About the Author Philip McCallion, PhD, ACSW, is Associate Professor in the School of Social Welfare at the University at Albany, a Hartford Geriatric Social Work Faculty Scholar, and Associate Director of the Institute of Gerontology. Dr. McCallion's research is focused on care giving issues, particularly the interaction of informal care with formal services, and the experiences of multicultural families. His work has addressed improving interactions between service providers in the fields of aging and developmental disabilities, developing strategies for reaching families that are not connected to service systems, demonstrating the effectiveness of empowerment-based group interventions for grandparent caregivers, and evaluation of nursing home-based, nonpharmacological interventions for persons with dementia. Dr. McCallion has published on interventions with those who care for frail elderly people, persons with Alzheimer's disease, and persons with developmental disabilities. He is co-editor of Grandparents as Carers of Children with Disabilities (Haworth) and Total Quality Management in the Social Services: Theory and Practice, and co-author of Maintaining Communication with Persons with Dementia.
