book was first published I gave them to my clients children in high school to give them a track to run on. It really helped them navigate college easier.

Majoring in the Rest of Your Life is a practical strategy to get you from your first semester of freshman year to your first job. The classroom is not the only place to learn in college, and Majoring in the Rest of Your Life shows you how to make the most of your opportunities to discover what you enjoy doing, get practical experience, and meet people. Carol Carter draws from her own success story as she expertly guides students through the steps to a rewarding college experience and career.

.com Carol Carter, a publishing-industry executive and the author of a half-dozen employment guides, believes college students who truly want to succeed after graduation must actually start preparing as soon as they begin their post-high school education. In Majoring in the Rest of Your Life, she presents a series of suggestions designed to help these students move from their often unfocused freshman years to landing the job of their dreams. Chapters deal with defining interests and goals, balancing academic and personal lives, aiming for useful extracurricular activities and part-time jobs, networking, traveling, and, eventually, sending out rsums and going on interviews. Carter certainly defines the linkage between school world and real world in a way that makes the connection click, and then provides the tools (including six appendices containing more than 50 pages of additional information and resources) that just might make it stick. --Howard Rothman Carol Carter's Majoring in the Rest of Your Life, should be on every college student's required reading list. -- Adeline Azrack, Public Health Student, Youth Worker, Stanford University 2002 Carol Carter's book offers tools to optimize the college experience and their years in starter-adulthood. -- Suzy Kellett, CPCC, Mother of 28-year-old quadruplets and Certified Life Coach Majoring is your guide to connecting with who you are and what you want in life. -- Joe Martin, National Motivational Speaker, Real World University About the Author Carol J. Carter is the founder and president of LifeBound, a seminar and coaching company for high school students, college students, and graduates. Carol was an executive in corporate America for fifteen years, hiring and managing a number of graduates straight from college before beginning LifeBound. She was promoted to a senior manager, Director of Marketing for Prentice Hall at age twenty-six. Today Carol is a national college and career expert and is featured on TV, radion and Internet shows on a regular basis.
